In Europe and in North-America several projects are trying to handle the problem of the multitude of databases concerning medieval texts and manuscripts. Different aims and standards are proposed by networks of philologists, codicologists, librarians. The research about medieval cultures will depend more and more on such decisions. Presenting an Italian project of interoperability, the workshop will provide a discussion about goals and practices for the next future.

COST Action IS1005 Medioevo Europeo.
Medieval Cultures and Technological Resources chair Agostino Paravicini Bagliani
www.medioevoeuropeo.eu

The main objective of the Action is to increase accessibility to and integration of medieval research results and tools through improved technological instruments and skills. Achieving the Action's objectives is made possible through the collaboration of key European institutes that have developed large scale databases, become familiar with related problems and attempted to identify targeted solutions.

Working Group 2 - Manuscripts and textual tradition chair Matthew Driscoll

from the Memorandum of Understanding:
In keeping with the over-all aims of the COST Action, Working Group 2 seeks to develop proposals for standardising data pertaining to manuscripts and texts in order to facilitate dialogue between existing and emerging electronic resources such as manuscript catalogues and digital text editions.
